

Toronto and Peel to Name and Shut down Workplaces with COVID-19 Breakouts; Other Regions may Follow

April 20, 2021

By Daniel Wong, and Max Skrow

As Ontario continues to experience its third wave of the COVID-19 pandemic, it has become clear that this wave is quite unlike the previous two. While Ontario continues to accelerate the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines, the daily case count of new COVID-19 infections is higher than ever before. Ontario is presently under a state of emergency and a stay-at-home order until at least May 20, 2021,^[1] and on April 16, 2021, Ontario imposed restrictions on interprovincial travel.

Earlier today, the Regions of Peel and Toronto announced that they will be imposing their own restrictions on workplaces in the regions, citing the regions' high case counts and the spread of COVID-19 variants. Toronto and Peel's Public Health units will issue orders, effective Friday April 23, 2021, requiring all business with five or more cases of COVID-19 in the previous 14 days to close for 10 days where:

1. The cases could have reasonably been acquired at work; or
2. No obvious source of infection has been identified outside of the workplace.

Businesses in Peel that are required to close under Peel's order will have their names published on the Region of Peel's website – an extension of the approach to combatting workplace infections that we saw earlier in the pandemic.^[2]

Essential businesses such as healthcare, emergency childcare and education businesses are exempt from mandatory full closure. A complete list of essential businesses for the purpose of these orders is in development and will be included in the orders when they are released. Toronto's order will be available on the City of Toronto website,^[3] when issued, by Friday April 23, 2021.

While these orders are limited to the Regions of Peel and Toronto at this time, other regions that are experiencing high COVID-19 case counts may impose similar measures. The possibility of other such measures, in conjunction with Ontario's aggressive approach to workplace inspections,^[4] makes pre-emptive compliance with Ontario's workplace health and safety legislation and COVID-19 measures as important as ever. Under Ontario's emergency COVID-19 legislation, corporations can be fined up to $1,000 for non-compliance, and individuals (including employees and patrons) can face fines of up to $750. More generally, serious breaches of the OHSA can expose individuals to fines of up to $100,000 and imprisonment for up to one year and can expose corporations to fines of up to $1,500,000.
